SWedes MANNING NEW OPS

— from tent camp
to tent OP

The Swedish Battalion keeps improving its operational capacity. 1 Company, responsible for the western part of sector 5 from Louroujina to the eastern outskirts of Nicosia, has recently manned five new OPs.

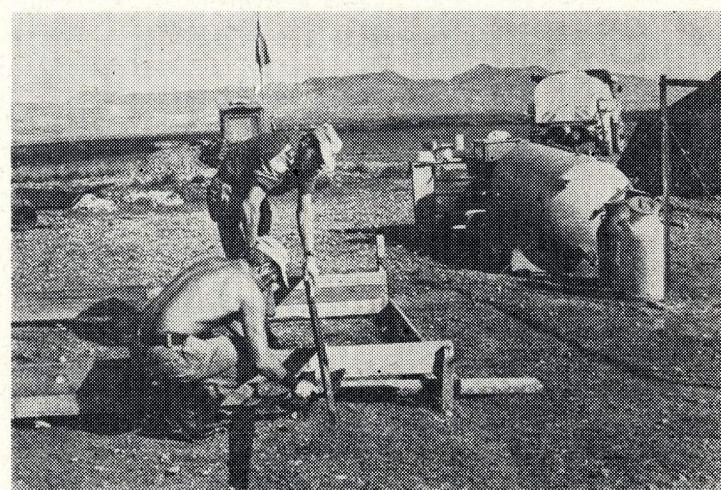

The tent camp in Larnaca is being emptied as the men move to live at the OPs. Houses are under construction, and in the meantime the soldiers live in tents.

Comfortable compared to the tent camp, says the men at OP 55 along the Larnaca-Nicosia road. They are Stefan Ingsberg, Eddie Gustavsson, Pontus Palm and sitting Roger Filipsson, Leif Lundberg and Frank Poulsen.

The Swedes took the lead after two kilometers, the only one who could keep up with them was Pte Clark, of Support Regiment.

MECHANICS AT WORK

Die Einsatzbereitschaft eines Bataillon hängt wesentlich von der Einsatzbereitschaft seiner Fahrzeuge ab. Gewissenhaft werden daher die Fahrzeuge von AUSCON gewartet und überprüft.

The speed of reaction of a Battalion depends to a large extent on the serviceability of its vehicles. The Austrian Contingent vehicles are seen here being inspected and serviced thoroughly.

As part of the re-deployment of the Force last year the Headquarters of the Swedish Civilian Police Contingent was moved from Famagusta to Larnaca — in fact to the building formerly used by the Larnaca detachment of the Austrian Civilian Police (left). Last week the editor and his new photographer visited the Swedish Police to see how they had settled in, and found that not only was the Police Station well organized, but that the Famagusta bar had been moved with the Contingent.
